Gould Takes Mexico 53-23

Gould Academy kept its Sun-Journal league record clean by trimming Mexico here last Tuesday, 53-23. The game started out as a thriller as the lead changed three times in the first period with the Huskies leading by the slim margin of 11-10. In the second period the home team put the game on ice as they outscored the visitors 12-2 assuming a commanding 24-12 lead at half time.

Except for a brief Mexico rally in the last of the third period, the Academy five had things well under control. Agnese with 17 and Rolfe with 16 points were the high scorers; but Johnson and Biden were strong cogs in a much better working team than anything they had shown before the holidays.

For the Pintos, Tom Fraser with 12 points, was outstanding.

In the preliminary game, the Husky underdogs had an easy night as Paul Fossett plucked 16 points to lead the home team to a 58-22 victory.

The visitors have a strong club, having defeated Stephens High at Rumford, one of Maine's leading teams. The JV fives will start the evening's entertainment at 7 p. m. Gould has been showing steady improvement, and it is hoped they will make a better showing than they did against Morse High earlier in the season.

On Tuesday Gould will again get into League competition as they meet the strong Norway High team. Again the JV's will start the affair at 7 p. m. This game should be a thriller as Norway is having a good season while Gould seems to be improving up to date. The winner is a toss-up.

MEASURING BLOOD PRESSURE IS COMPLICATED OPERATION

Contrary to the popular notion, measuring blood pressure is not a simple process like taking temperature and checking weight, it was stated recently by Dr. Carl J. Wiggers, Western Reserve University School of Medicine, Cleveland. Dr. Wiggers stressed the need for accurate and consistent blood pressure readings in commenting on a new guide for physicians issued by the American Heart Association. The guide was prepared by a special committee headed by Dr. Wiggers, who is professor of Physiology at Western Reserve.

Accurate blood pressure readings, it was pointed out, are considered an important key in detecting abnormal conditions that may cause heart and blood vessel disorders. In highlighting the necessity for proper techniques in blood pressure measurement, Dr. Wiggers said:

"We know that in many amusement parks and fairs one may obtain for a small fee not only a reading of the lines of one's hand or the bumps on one's head, but also of one's blood pressure. The operators in charge of such blood pressure machines probably give the subject a reading to the best of their ability, but it is highly questionable whether any of them have sufficient basic training to give correct readings."

"The patient whose blood pressure is being read is under the impression that the procedure consists simply a cuff on the arm, inflating and deflating it, and that in some simple but unknown way his blood pressure is being measured," Dr. Wiggers commented. "It is not generally realized that the measurement of blood pressure is not a mechanical affair, such as taking temperature and ascertaining weight. On the contrary, accurate readings depend fully as much on the technique, skill, and knowledge of the operator as on the accuracy of the instrument. Everyone will realize that it is not only important to get a reading of blood pressure, but that the reading be as accurate as possible."

To assist in assuring the validity and uniformity of blood pressure readings, the American Heart Association has published its guide for physicians. Dr. Edward A. Greco, President of the Maine Heart Association, an affiliate of the American Heart Association, announced in Portland recently that the guides would be distributed to all physicians in the State as part of the broad multiphase educational program of the local association.

In explaining the development of the latest guide, Dr. Greco said, "The physician, and through him nurses and properly trained technicians, are being constantly kept informed of new discoveries which help to make blood pressure readings more accurate. The measurement of human blood pressure is still a comparatively new tool, the introduction of which is well within the memory of many of the older groups of practitioners."

LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

For 1952 I propose donning the old "thinking cap." From one end of Main Street to the other you will find nobody too cheerful or who has even a remote notion of what is going on. With such a start everybody admitting that there is something in the haystack except just hay—we can proceed.

We been listening in great fashion we been figuring the gent doing the talking knew what he was talking about. We know we are in some sort of a dilemma, but how we got there, we are not too sure. We scratch our dome like when the man picks up the shell and the pea is not there.

A gold coin, if you are caught with one, you are locked up. Good and solid money is illegal. In a schoolhouse in Los Angeles eighteen in each 100 between 16 and 18 years old did not know there are 12 months in a year. 12 spelled "writing" with 2's—16 didn't know the "why" of the Fourth of July.

A highly paid Agriculture Extension Service tells us that an apple for eating should be chosen for appearance, texture, flavor. Oil my, Fumididdles can be our downfall. How about it for 1952 speak up folks—Resolutions are now the mode.

Yours with the low-down, JO BERNA

HENRY A. SHOREY, JR.

Henry A. Shorey, Jr., editor and publisher of the Bridgton News since 1923, died Saturday noon in the Northern Cumberland Memorial Hospital, Bridgton, following a heart attack the night before.

Shorey, among the last of Maine's old-time country newspaper editors, was taken ill Friday night after the regular weekly edition of the News had left the office.

He was born in Bridgton, Oct. 14, 1877, the son of the late Major Henry A. and Ida Currier Shorey, and except for his years in state service in Augusta spent his entire life there.

His father founded the Bridgton News in 1870, and he himself became editor upon the death of his father in 1923.

It was his proud boast that the paper still sold for three cents per copy 81 years after his father had founded it. Upon issuance of Friday's edition the price was raised to five cents.

Shorey was the first chief of the Maine State Police, and at the time of his death held the commission of Honorary Colonel in that organization, a certificate to that effect hanging in a frame just above his desk in the little partitioned-off section which was his office. He was also former Deputy Secretary of State.

He was graduated from Bowdoin College in 1900, and until this year usually made the trip to Brunswick each year to attend the reunion of that class. His first newspaper job was with the Bangor Commercial, covering the scattered towns of Orono, Orono and Brewer.

Shorey gave up his newspaper work for a time to hold several political jobs. He was Deputy Secretary of State under Frank V. Ball, and resigned that post to become chief organizer of the present State Highway Police.

In addition to his newspaper work in Bridgton, Shorey served for a number of years as recorder of the Northern Cumberland Municipal Court.

A member of the Masonic Lodge in Bridgton, he was also a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity at Bowdoin.

Surviving are a son, Henry A. Shorey, III, of Lexington, Mass., employed by a Boston book publishing firm, a daughter, Elizabeth, in a Southington, Conn., school, and three sisters, Miss Eva L. Shorey and Mrs. Maude K. Walker, both of Bridgton; and Mrs. Harold A. Allan of Chevy Chase, Md.

Funeral services were held Tuesday, Jan. 8, at the First Congregational Church, South High Street, Bridgton. Interment was in the High Street Cemetery.

CIVIL DEFENSE

PUBLIC SAFETY

Here are some more questions on Civil Defense—and their answers. Remember, your State, County and Local CD Directors can provide you with the detailed answers to your civil defense and public safety questions and problems.

Why are we instructed not to use telephones during or right after an alert or raid?

Telephones form part of the key communications system of any civil defense setup. They will be kept busy with emergency calls of top importance. If thousands of people start making personal calls, telephone lines will become jammed and useless.

What is mutual aid?
That is an arrangement whereby communities and states assist each other. For example, if Portland is hit, all surrounding communities will pour supplies, equipment and manpower into the stricken area. In that way, the tremendous load on a bombed city is eased, and civil defense is able to work swiftly and efficiently.

The primary job of the smaller communities will be to aid the larger cities and to care for the evacuees. We would not stand idly by and watch our neighbor's house burn; neither should we expect to ignore our civil defense responsibilities because we live in a non-target area.

Natural disasters—such as forest fires—underline the importance of mutual aid. Few towns are themselves able to afford sufficient equipment and forces to protect their citizens against life and property-destroying calamities similar to the forest fires of 47.

We cannot wait for such disasters to strike; organization NOW is the one sure method of being prepared to wage a successful battle when an emergency arises.

Right Human Relations

CHRIST JESUS outlined the foundation of all right human relations when he said (Luke 10:27), "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself."

He taught a way of life harmonious for all men and nations, based on an understanding of God and man as Father and son. He illustrated his love for God by his love for mankind. He exemplified his divine sonship by healing the sickness and sin of those who sought his aid and by overcoming all material limitations. When he fed the multitudes confronted by a scarcity of food, he proved Spirit to be the ever-available source of supply and demonstrated his understanding that God's divine Love, meets every need.

But Jesus sternly rebuked the materialism which indulged in money changing in the temple, and he routed the offenders. Thus he clearly indicated that men should not make material acquisition the primary motive of life. He said on another occasion (Matthew 6:33), "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." In all that he said and did he revealed unmistakably that his reason for existing was to show forth the perfect man of God's creating, who eternally reflects God's ever-present love and power.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, discussing the two great Scriptural commandments which Jesus emphasized, writes, in the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 467): "It should be thoroughly understood that all men have one Mind, one God and Father, one Life, Truth, and Love. Mankind will become perfect in proportion as this fact becomes apparent, war will cease and the true brotherhood of man will be established. Having no other gods, turning to no other but the one perfect Mind to guide him, man is the likeness of God, pure and eternal, having that Mind which was also in Christ."

In order truly to love God and man, as Jesus did, it is necessary to understand that God is Life, Truth, Love, the divine Principle of all being, and that man is God's reflection. As God's reflection, man is perfect, complete, and forever harmonious. He is incapable of discord, disease, and death and is never subject to lack. He has neither material origin nor mortal existence, nor is he dependent upon matter for life or subsistence. Man is entirely spiritual, forever supplied with all good by reason of his eternal unity with the divine Mind, God. These are fundamental spiritual facts which repudiate the actuality of matter and mortality. To the extent that we understand and apply them, we find them reflected in more harmonious human relations.

The chief stumbling block for men in all ages has been the belief in the reality and substantiality of matter. In the belief that material gain brings happiness, promotes health, and sustains life, men become greedy, selfish, envious, material minded, dishonest in business, and unjust to their fellow men.

The right basis of all friendly human relations is the understanding of God as Father, the divine Mind and Intelligence of the universe, and of man as His son or infinite reflection. This true relationship does not concede the existence of minds many, nor does it function on a material basis for personal gain. On the contrary, it acknowledges and expresses the omnipotence and omnipresence of God, publicizes good, promotes justice and harmony, and supplies all with abundance.

Thus understood and functioning in individual, national, and international life, the spiritual idea of life and substance expresses the divine relationship of God and man and demonstrates the brotherhood of man in human experience. -The Christian Science Monitor.

By LYDIE HULL

ONE HUNDRED and fifty years of free enterprise have made our nation a real "welfare state"; a "welfare state" such as exists nowhere else on earth - nor has ever existed. In this country any ambitious, mentally sound and honest man can earn success and happiness. And if he is none of these, he still doesn't have to starve. Just as long as we the people elect to public office those who believe in and will fight for our form of government, we will be able to resist the evil forces which are now so rampant on this globe. Today the great freemen's machine called the United States is supplying the money and grinding out the materials to defend the entire western world from the foe of democracy. Russia can't begin to compete; nor could any socialist-run nation ever compete for long with one in which men work for a reward - and get it.

How is it then that certain groups and individuals believe they could improve upon the job which 150 million free men are doing? To the mind of this writer the answer has always been obvious: that the leaders of these so-called "welfare" movements are totally insane; that in their hearts they know they could not improve our present condition and have no particular intention of trying to do so. That their sole object - and mad ambition - is to gain control of this nation through undermining the power of the people's representatives in congress.

They now have the ball rolling toward the people's goal, and if we don't elect a captain next November to stop these socialists, we will lose our freedom, our dignity and our happiness.

The whole world is in danger from communism, but this nation's more immediate threat is from the socialists - or misnamed "liberals" - who have become so active and so powerful in Washington and all over the country.

The Fatians started England rolling down hill some years. Their prototypes are undermining our government.

Beware some organizations with fancy patriotic names.

SPECIALIST SAYS SECURE SEED SOON

Potato farmers will find it advisable to get their blue-tag certified seed potatoes soon if they have not already done so, advises Oscar L. Wyman, crops specialist Maine Extension Service. There are two reasons why Wyman thinks that the very best seed potatoes may be in short supply next spring. One is that Maine potato growers did not raise as much seed last summer for certification as usual. The other is that growers in the southern states are planning to plant a larger acreage this year. Additional reason for using certified seed is that it is probably free from the new potato disease that is causing some anxiety among potato growers - verticillium wilt.

U.S. Needs Civil Defense

TEN BASIC SERVICES FORM CORE OF HOME FRONT PROTECTION

(This is the ninth of a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration. It may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for ten cents.)

By MILLARD CALDWELL
Federal Civil Defense Administrator

The Federal Civil Defense Administration, for the sake of national uniformity, has set up these ten basic services: Warden, Fire, Police, Health, Welfare, Engineering, Rescue, Communications, Transportation, and Staff. You can imagine what a gigantic task it will be to man these various services. Some 15,000,000 volunteers are needed for this purpose.

The backbone of civil defense is the warden service. It is the source of neighborhood defense leadership before, during, and after an enemy attack. The warden's job is to help save lives and property. Before an emergency, his main duty is to help people prepare; during an emergency, he conducts people to safety; after the emergency, he helps restore order.

Wardens must be volunteers, well known and respected in the community, whose leadership will be accepted by their neighbors and fellow workers. As a general rule, each warden post will be responsible for a residential block or factory area where about 500 people live or work. Several wardens may be assigned to such a post.

They will teach people how to protect themselves, instruct them in civil defense regulations, distribute civil defense information, keep lists of the people in their charge, and gather information about buildings and equipment in their neighborhoods.

Their records will include the home address, age, and physical condition of all persons in their charge. They also should know which people need special care and how to get in touch with their relatives and friends.

Other Important Duties
Wardens have other important duties too. If a warning sounded, they would conduct workers or the occupants of buildings to shelter areas. They would have the responsibility of helping to prevent panic among the population, rendering first aid, and performing light rescue duties. If needed, they would help other services to fight fires and clear debris.

They also would help restore the orderly life of the community immediately after an enemy attack. They would take a roll call of all people in their areas. If anyone were missing, or needed nursing or medical care, they would report the facts at once to the control center.

The warden service works directly with individuals, families, neighborhoods, and employee groups. It is the link between the specialized civil defense service and the people.

Women Have Important Role
Women must play an important part in the warden service. This is especially true of housewives, for most women are at their home posts day and night. Usually they know their own neighborhoods better than men can ever know them. Women should instruct themselves in the warden service as a first step in the organization of civil defense for their neighborhoods.

Outstanding men and women who can assume responsibility are urged to volunteer for the warden service.

(The next article will discuss other civil defense services.)

"EASY DOES IT"

WHITE SPOTS on furniture caused by water or heat may be removed by rubbing the spot with a cloth dampened with spirits of camphor, ammonia, or alcohol. As soon as the mark is off, rub with furniture polish or wax. White spots on highly polished furniture, caused by hot or wet dishes may be removed by rubbing the spots with essence of peppermint.

Nothing beats the hot and cold treatment for itching the tops of fruit jars and other bottles. First immerse jar in boiling water and then dip quickly in water as cold as possible. Instant contraction loosens the top.

When making apple pie from fresh apples, peel and use large shredder for preparing the apples; they cook much quicker.

To loosen butterfat that clings so tenaciously to the jar, glass, or pitcher, dip into one teaspoon of baking soda and fill with water, let stand.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Cranberry Sherbet
(Makes 1 quart)
4 cups fresh cranberries
2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon gelatin
1 1/2 cup cold water

Juice and rind of 1 lemon
Juice and rind of 1 orange
Combine cranberries, water and sugar and cook until cranberries are soft, about 10 minutes. Put through sieve or food mill. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot cranberry liquid. Stir in fruit juices and rind. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze until firm.

To prevent webworms from getting into your meal in the hot weather, sprinkle a little salt through the meal, but be careful when making bread not to add too much salt.

To freshen your garbage can, use one tablespoon lye to one quart of hot water.

Never wash the hands with water after peeling onions. Simply rub them with coarse salt and the odor will disappear.

Has milk ever boiled over on your stove? It is difficult and messy to remove unless you sprinkle a layer of salt on the milk. Salt and water soaking in a charred steak pan also loosens the dirt and makes cleaning easier.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

When you have a collection of pictures like this one you can be sure of applause from your friends.

Success Secret

JUST the other evening I heard a conversation that is undoubtedly a repeated time and again when people are looking at each other's pictures.

On this occasion two people had brought slides to show at an informal gathering of a group of old friends who hadn't seen each other for a long time. The young lady showed her slides first. The presentation was punctuated by admiring comments on the photographic quality in addition to the examinations about the subject matter.

When she had finished showing her pictures the man remarked that he was embarrassed to show his slides. "Why, every single one in your collection is good!" he exclaimed. "The exposure is right every time and so is the composition. What kind of camera do you use?" How do you do it?

Her answer was a simple one. "Oh, it's easy," she said, "I only keep the good ones. The others go in the wastebasket unless the subject has some special personal value. In that case I put them aside for my personal enjoyment. But when I show my slides, I only show the good ones."

Now there is a big secret of a photographic success. Unfortunately, very few of us have the ability to throw away a picture we've made. We can see how bad it is. We apologize every time we show it—whether it's a color transparency or a snapshot print. But we just can't seem to bring ourselves to part with it. If you have pictures of this kind in your collection—and it is a rare snapshot indeed who hasn't at least take a cue from the young lady and put them aside. Don't inflict them on your friends. There are many mistakes we can't hide, but it is easy to destroy evidence of our photographic failures.

A Peek at the Stars

By LYN CONNELLEY

CATHY LEWIS, who is Jane Stacy of CBS Radio Network's "My Friend Irma" show, was born in Spokane, Wash. Her flair for the dramatic developed when her mother opened a costume and design shop in Wenatchee, Wash., and the youngster became interested in the colorful clothing and gleaming jewelry. Following one appearance at the Wenatchee apple blossom festival when she was seven, Cathy was hired by the Jensen Von Herberg chain of theaters as "The Jazz Baby," singer and dancer. According to Cathy, the sight of her on-stage in long curls, ruffles and patent leather slippers, singing the praises of Barney Google and his goo-goo-googly eyes, put her family on the move.

The move took them to St. Paul, Minn., where the erstwhile "Jazz Baby" was enrolled in the Nativitty parochial school. Here, and later at St. Joseph's Academy, her dramatic talent qualified her for leads in student productions and appearances with the St. Paul civic repertory group. Her singing talent won her an audition with Herbie Kay and a six-week contract on a radio revue originating at WCCO, CBS station in Minneapolis. Before she had finished school, Cathy had appeared as guest vocalist with Ben Pollack, Herb Stern, Red Nichols, Johnny Davis and Glen Gray. After doing a guest spot with Kay Kyser in Chicago, Cathy decided to try her luck in Hollywood.

She came to the West Coast in 1935, sang with Ray Noble's band, landed a leading role with the Ben Bard players and a screen contract with MGM, appeared in Pasadena Playhouse productions, free-lanced at Warner Brothers and Universal, then joined the west coast company of "The Man who came to Dinner," hoping to troupe her way to New York City.

Instead, after six months, the company disbanded in San Francisco. Cathy returned to Hollywood and took up radio acting. Today, she and her husband, CBS Radio Producer-Director-Actor Elliott Lewis, are identified as "Mr. and Mrs. Radio." They met in 1941 when they worked a radio show together and were married on April 30, 1943, a union which required no name change for Cathy was named Lewis.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas the Great Master has removed from our midst our beloved Brother Fred Wight, a member of our order, calling him to the great beyond, to remind us of our frailties, nevertheless we sorrow in our earthly way for our Brother. Therefore be it resolved that in the death of our Brother we lose a faithful member, resolved that we drape the Charter for thirty days, resolved that the resolutions be spread upon our records and a copy be sent to his bereaved wife.

"I REMEMBER"
BY THE OLD TIMERS

From William R. Beach, Montgomery, Mich.: I remember when my father ran a sawmill in Ohio and a man named Seth Moore drew logs to the mill in the winter with a pair of Holstein oxen named Tom and Jerry. I used to hitch my sled behind his and ride.

From Sims, Salem, Ind.: I remember that in 1878 my mother had me eating sulphur mixed with sorghum molasses to purify my blood and wearing around my neck a string of amulets to ward off evil spirits. Then the itch was thought of as a plague, and if one got it, he would keep scratching seven years. Believe me, I never had it.

From E. E. Meredith, Fairmont, W. Va.: I remember when high-wheeled bicycles vied with other forms of transportation in parades and celebrations. (Mail your memories to THE OLD TIMERS, Box 550, Frankfort, Ky.)
